"Mr. Peckham seems to have lost his head since he was rejected by the Senate." was Chairman Lexow's answer to a number of reporters who asked him for an opinion on the speech.

Benators Bradley, O'Connor, Cantor and Robertson were the other members of the Committee present when the prosedings opened at 11 o'clock.

The first witness called by Mr. Suthering was John La Fonde, a shoemaker, and the Collector Kilbreth, at the Custom-House and the Custom-House matters.

Mr. Carlisle said upon Collector Kilbreth, at the Custom-House, and remained with him.

Both the Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle, who is temporarily a guest of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, visited Wail street this morning.

At 11 o'clock he called upon Collector Kilbreth, at the Custom-House and the Custom-House and the Custom-House and the Custom-House and the Custom-House matters.

Mr. Carlisle said to an "Evening World" reporter later, that his business in New York was of a private character. He had not talked to any bankers, nor had he visited the Sub-Treasury. "There wasn't any interference at the last election. In 1892 it would be hard to say what they didn't do.

"It was knock down and drag out all day long. Hallots were passed into the booths; heelers were allowed to go in with voters without taking any oath, and although I kept objecting all the time the police would never listen to me, and took no trouble to stop the violation of the law that was going on."

"Ind you know that a polling place is under the absolute control of the inspectors?" asked Mr. Nicoll.

Chairman Lexow objected to this asying that the Committee knew what the Election law was.

"Bo do I, Mr. Chairman," put in the viness, "and if I had been an inspector there I would have had every one of those policemen in juil."

Mr. Nicoll stated that nearly all the testimony taken so far had only shown suspicious circumstances, and none of itsuch a state of affairs as would justify a policeman in making an arrest unless he had been ordered to do so by an inspector, or a voter himself had made charge.

The witness went on to tell how he had been insulted by the police and said he had made no complaint to the captain or at Police Headquarters.

"I left it all in the hands of Mr. Conkling. I thought he was the person to attend to it," said Mr. La Fonde.

Thomas E. Flannery, a Republican iquor dealer, testified that last Summer was ordered by several Tammany men in his district to give up supporting Walter H. Bahon, and work for the Tammany candidate for Assemblyman.

Chairman Lexow began to ask the wittess some questions about the manner which the prosecution of excise cases as conducted, when Mr. Nicoli prosited that the Committee was exceedgits powers in trying to cast discredit

No further quesetions were asked by the Chairman, and John J. O'Brien, another liquor dealer, of Washington and Perry streets, was called. O'Brien satisfied that on the morning of last section day Ward Detective Brennan, of the Charles street station, came to him with a marked paster ballot, which he gave me.

"What did he say to you?"
"He said I must vote it."
"Did you take it?"

"Yes,"
O'Brien said he was a Tammany man, but had favored Bahan, the independent candidate for Assembly, while the detective wanted him to vote for McDermott, the regular Tammany man. Breman came right into his saloon and gave him the paster before a lot of people, but he could not remember the names of any of them.

"Did you do so?"

"Not by a long shot. They struck the wong place."

"Do you know the policeman who made this demand?"

"No. I would not know him now."

Henry Kuster, who voted in Varick treet, told the Committee that just aften he had given his vote to the inspector to deposit the policeman tapned him at the shoulder and told him he had left mething in the booth.
